

Rivel's growing investor communications division, StoryLign, is currently seeking a motivated Investor Communications Associate Director to work with clients to create, improve and expand their investor communications. This is an exciting opportunity to work in a new, very fast-growing division of the well-established Rivel organization. We work with clients on a broad spectrum of projects including investor days, earnings results, conference presentations and quarterly investor presentations used for NDRs.

This new position requires someone who understands how investors think and how to best communicate an investment thesis. Notably, our clients cover every industry imaginable, so it's important to be a quick study and have the desire to continuously learn new things. Candidates need to have a creative approach to different types of communication strategies, thinking about each client individually, while drawing on Rivel's extensive reach for new ideas. In addition, candidates need to be able to work quickly and independently.

Location is remote. The desired candidate is someone who wants to work in a team environment even if the team is located across the globe. The ideal candidate will have a minimum of 3 years of professional experience in Investor Relations with prior experience within the organization in functional areas of accounting, operations or communications.
